Innovation is something different that has an impact. It might be improving upon or innovating a product, service, or process, or creating something new that solves a problem or makes the world a better place.

The project should be advanced beyond the idea or concept stage and have demonstrated that it has been put into action. Projects do not have to be full-fledged innovations, commercialized, or have the ability to monetize, e.g., social or community innovations may have different valuable impacts.

The evaluations will be done by evaluators for the Regional Awards and by national judges for the National Finalist Awards and National Awards. The evaluators and judges will base their choice of award recipients on the above-mentioned Judging Criteria. Evaluators and judges will reach their decisions by consensus.

All decisions of the evaluators and judges at the regional and national levels are final and binding. The judging scores for any entry will not be revealed.
